

IT MIGHT BE TODAY

Wave Your Hand

Every Sunday we present a prophecy update. We show how news and trends in the world corroborate centuries-old prophecies you read in the Bible.

Two-thousand years ago the apostle John wrote The Revelation of Jesus Christ while exiled on the Island of Patmos. Jesus showed John the future. Part of it was a technology of personal identification by which all the citizens on the earth would conduct their daily activities. John was shown that people would have something in or on their hand or forehead - he called it a "mark."

We are the first generation in history that could see this technology implemented right now, today.

The latest development was announced in an article in the Huffington Post on September 13. The article was titled, Your Hand is the Password of the Future.

Excerpts:

Passwords for online banking, social networks and email could be replaced with the wave of a hand if prototype technology developed by Intel makes it to tablets and laptops.

Aiming to do away with the need to remember passwords for growing numbers of online services, Intel researchers have put together a tablet with new software and a biometric sensor that recognizes the unique patterns of veins on a person's palm.

"The problem with passwords - we use too many of them, their rules are complex, and they differ for different websites," Sridhar Iyengar, director of security research at Intel Labs, said at the annual Intel Developer Forum in San Francisco on Thursday. "There is a way out of it, and biometrics is an option."

Iyengar demonstrated the technology, quickly waving his hand in front of a tablet but not touching it. Once the tablet recognizes a user, it can securely communicate that person's identity to banks, social networks and other services where the person has accounts, he said.

Meanwhile just outside of San Antonio, Texas, the Northside Independent School District has begun the Student Locator Project. The project would compel 4,200 pupils in John Jay High School and Anson Jones Middle School to wear radio frequency identification (RFID) microchips embedded in the student IDs worn around their necks. On the first day of school August 27, the NISD officially launched its mandate that all the students at those two schools must wear the tags, each of which emits a unique signal for a particular student.

The future the Bible predicted is here. Israel is a nation again. The nations of the world are lining up against the Jews. Europe is a major power. There is rapid increase in knowledge. And we now have the technology to be identified by our hands or foreheads.

Are you ready for the rapture? If not, get ready, stay ready, and keep looking up. Ready or not, Jesus is coming!
